BLUEBERRIES and HUCKLEBERRIES

Huckleberries only grow wild, often on Western mountainsides.

HOW TO CHOOSE

- Choose plump, firm blueberries that are dry and uniform in size.
- Huckleberries range in color from purple to red when ripe.

HOW TO STORE

- Store berries in a sealed container in refrigerator for up to 2 weeks.
- Wash under cold running water just prior to eating.

NUTRITION FACTS

- Blueberries are good sources of vitamin C and fiber. They also have high levels of antioxidants that may help to prevent cancer.

Fun ways for your family to enjoy the sweetness of blueberries and huckleberries

- From breakfast to dessert, blueberries and their wild cousins, huckleberries, make a colorful splash.
- For breakfast, add berries to hot or cold cereal – or blend into a yogurt smoothie.
- For PB & BB, sprinkle blueberries into a PB sandwich.
- For a nutrient-rich dessert, toss berries into a fruit salad.
- Stir blueberries into pancake or muffin batter.

BELL PEPPERS:

Green, Red, Orange, and More

Sweet peppers and hot peppers all come from the same family.

HOW TO CHOOSE

- Choose peppers that are brightly colored with smooth skin.
- Avoid peppers with dull skin that are pitted or shriveled.

HOW TO STORE

- Refrigerate bell peppers in plastic bag for 4-5 days.
- Wash before slicing. Keep sliced peppers in airtight tub for 1-2 days.

NUTRITION FACTS

- All peppers – hot and sweet – are excellent sources of vitamin C. The red and orange types are also high in vitamin A.

Easy ways for your family to enjoy the colorful crunchiness of bell peppers

- Add the bright colors of bell pepper slices or rings to any vegetable snack tray.
- Chopped bell peppers make a delightful addition to tossed salads as well as soups and casseroles.
- Stuffed peppers are an easy main dish. Steam cored peppers for 5 minutes; stuff with a mixture of cooked ground beef and rice with taco seasonings. Bake in a 350 F oven for 20-30 minutes.
